GREATITUDE STORIES : "Stairway to Freedom"

Colorado Couple's Stairway to Freedom

What is a forever home? Perhaps you are one of millions of Americans who would love to stay in your home well past retirement and into your golden years. Or maybe mobility and ability challenges have you looking for ways to make the rooms in your home more easily accessible to yourself or a loved one. The forever home concept has a unique meaning to everyone.

Kay & David Van Dyken's forever home is the one they custom designed and built 25 years ago. They live in Woodland Park, Colorado among the peaceful mountains where wildlife like bobcat, lynx, deer, elk and black bears are regular visitors. David was a draftsman most of his career and designed their forever home to be energy efficient. Small details like the direction the house faces to the thickness of the pane of glass on the windows and doors were carefully constructed.

Since their retirement, the couple traveled coast to coast in their motor-home for about 5 years. Toward the end of this life adventure Kay's hip pain and mobility issues became extremely more prevalent. "I have a weird body, I drive doctor's nuts!", shared Kay. She has bone on bone, no cartilage and bone spurs in her hips and surgery would compromise her body with infection. At home, they have a standard flight of stairs leading to the basement and Kay's bedroom. These steps became so much of an obstacle in the activities of her daily living that a stair-lift solution was inevitable.

Kay and Dave are in their 70's and have been married 58 years. With their new stair-lift they get to experience the freedom of not just living but thriving in their forever home.
